

Writing Feature Films

An online course for regional and remote Queensland writers looking for a forum to develop their talent.

Special introductory price offer!

Hugh O'Brien feature film and theatre writer.

This 4 week online course is designed to unearth regional and remote Queensland writing talents looking to further their skills in screenplay writing. Tutor Hugh O'Brien is from the country himself and though he's now based in Brisbane, he's eager to ensure that his peers and friends out West and up North have as much opportunity to learn as their city counterparts. Hugh is an experienced writer with two features made and several scripts optioned in Hollywood.

Time: 6 – 8pm, 14th, 21st & 28th July & 4th August (NB: a tech setup night will run on 7th July)

Cost: $120 total. This course fee is below cost price thanks to the generosity of Hugh O'Brien and QPIX CEO Kerry O'Rourke who are keen to reduce entry barriers to country writers wishing to further their screen writing skills.

Place: From the comfort of your own home via the internet.

A note from the tutor

I'm originally from the South Burnett area but I've been to virtually every town in rural Queensland and have a keen understanding about the challenges of trying to write screenplays and plays for a person based outside a capital city. I have twice won Australia's only playwriting competition specifically for plays on a rural theme (Dogwood Playwriting Initiative organised by the Miles Regional Arts Council).

Apply today as this course is limited to only 10 participants.
